Henning Vogt was born in 1972 in Bochum, Germany. After finishing High School, he began to study History, German and Art History. From 1994-1998 he attended the "Academy for Music and Theatre" in Leipzig, to become an actor.

Since then, he's been working for film and television productions as well as for the theatre. During his studies he appeared in productions in Chemnitz, Rudolstadt and at the Dresden State Theatre. In 1998 he joined the Oldenburg State Theatre, where he starred in productions such as Martin McDonagh's "The Cripple of Inishman" and the stage adaptation of Irvine Welsh's "Trainspotting".

Henning Vogt has been performing at the Deutsches Theater Berlin from 2001-2018 in various international acclaimed productions, such as "Faust", "The Oresteia" (Golden Laurel Wreath Award, Theatertreffen-Invitation) and "Emilia Galotti", which participated on several Theatre Festivals worldwide, as the BAM Festival in New York, Moscow, Mexico City, Tokyo, Toronto and Rome, for instance, and won several awards: the Nestroy-Award, the Golden Mask and the Friedrich-Luft-Award.

He played in Rudolf Thome's roadmovie "Into the Blue", in „Magical Mystery oder die Rückkehr des Karl Schmidt“, directed by Arne Feldhusen, as well, as the major character Leon Marx in the German TV series "Himmel und Erde - ein göttliches Team", a young priest, who is starting to work in his first parish or Vlado Horvat in „Letzte Spur Berlin“.

Currently Henning Vogt is performing on the stage of the Berliner Ensemble in „A Streetcar Named Desire" as Steve (written by Tennessee Williams), directed by Michael Thalheimer.
